CHILDREN TAUGHT TO KEEP ANZAC SPIRIT ALIVE

Special projects funded by the NSW Government to help school children and young people learn about the Anzac legacy, were today announced by Minister for Citizenship and Communities Victor Dominello.

Mr Dominello said 16 schools and not-for-profit organisations will share in more than $60,000 in the first round of youth grants as part of the Anzac Community Grants program.

“It is vital that our younger generations understand and honour the enormous sacrifices that Australian soldiers have made throughout our nation’s history,” he said.

“This funding enables schools and other organisations to engage children in the Anzac legacy, with a particular focus on using web and multimedia technologies to share old stories with a modern audience.

“It will help young people develop a greater understanding of the first Anzacs and other servicemen and women who followed in their footsteps as well as help ensure that the Anzac spirit lives on.”

Mr Dominello said the Anzac Community Grants program assists local communities across NSW to prepare for the upcoming Centenary of Anzac (2014 – 2018).

“For example, students at John Paul College in Coffs Harbour will create an online memorial to diggers with links to the school. At Lapstone Public School in the Blue Mountains students will complete a project on the Australian Light Horse Brigade.”

The Centenary of Anzac will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the First World War, and reflect on the century of service that followed – including the Second World War, Korean War and Vietnam War, as well as peacekeeping and current engagements.

The NSW Government has established an advisory council, chaired by former chief of the Defence Force General Peter Cosgrove AC MC (Ret’d), to oversee a wide range of commemorative activities and events around the State.

The Anzac Community Grants program provides grants of up to $5,000 to ex-service organisations, community groups, schools and other educational institutions, local government, museums, or historical societies.

As part of the program, grants totalling $40,000 were announced earlier this year to help the State’s multicultural communities celebrate the Anzac legacy.
